Dhamma Koṭa, meaning 'Fort of Dhamma', is located near the serene village of Khokhaddad, about 14 km from the city of Rajkot. Rajkot is one hour air travel from Mumbai, and is also well connected by road and rail to Mumbai and Ahmedabad. Established on 14 acres of land backed with hills, Dhamma Koṭa offers ten-day courses around the year as well as occasional Satipaṭṭhāna courses. Facilities presently available include two Dhamma halls, a Pagoda with 32 cells to be expanded to 168, segregated dining areas, a total of around 100 self-contained single and double rooms. New construction projects include two generator rooms, an overhead water tank, student and staff quarters. About 5000 trees and plants add to the natural beauty of this Dhamma centre, providing a peaceful environment for serious meditation.

Dhamma Pīṭha, meaning 'Seat of Dhamma', is located 45 kms from Ahmedabad city in the Western Indian state of Gujarat. Established in 1998, the Centre conducts two courses a month, as well as courses for old students and children. With a spacious Dhamma Hall to seat 250 students, a Pagoda with 36 cells, individual and double-occupancy rooms, the Centre is undergoing expansion to include more female accommodation with attached bathrooms, residences for teachers, a spacious kitchen and dining halls for male and female students. A broad walkway with greenery is an added highlight. More landscaping is in progress.
