Dhamma Vāhini, meaning 'Stream of Dhamma,' is another of the many Vipassana centres springing up near the megapolis of Mumbai. Located on 29 acres of land on the bank of River Kalu, the centre is well connected with Mumbai by road, by suburban rail and with the nearest railway station, Titwala, being on the rail route to Dhamma Giri from Mumbai.

Work on the Dhamma Vāhini began in the year 2002, and the centre is presently at the planning stage. Facilities available are expected to provide for 80 to 100 students for courses all through the year.

Dhamma Vipula

Mr Dhanaraj Koche, tel: 91-22- 27667087.

Dhamma Vipula, meaning 'Abundance of Dhamma', is the first Vipassana center in Mumbai. Situated atop Parsik Hill and surrounded by forestland in the New Bombay township, the centre is suitable for meditation even amid a major metropolis. With a total built up area of 5500 sq m, the center is expected to serve 200 students. Construction will begin in September 2005. A 100-foot Pagoda is being planned, with approximately 200 cells. The pagoda location ensures that it will be visible even from a distance.

Dhamma Vipula is well connected by local suburban trains, is approachable from either Nerul or CBD - Belapur Local Railway Stations and connected to the Pune - Mumbai highway.
